Many people have contributed, directly and indirectly, to this third edition of Land Use and Society: Geography, Law, and Public Policy. First and foremost, I thank Heather Boyer, senior editor at Island Press, who once again has expertly and cheerfully guided me through the labyrinth of the book revision process. I appreciate her timely and useful feedback on editorial matters as well as her broad knowledge of the urban sustainability literature. Also at Island Press, production editor Sharis Simonian has kept the entire book revision on track, and Rebecca Bright, editorial assistant, has been enormously helpful in overseeing the art elements of the book.

Once again, I thank Kathleen M. Lafferty as editorial advisor, copy editor, and dear friend for her unfailing technical skill, patience, and sense of humor in this our fourth book collaboration. I am also grateful to Don Sluter of the Department of Geosciences at the University of Massachusetts Amherst for his help in redrafting certain diagrams and figures. Barbara Fell-Johnson, director of the Hampshire County Law Library, vetted Box 9.1 on legal citations.

Although I have technically “retired” from the University of Massachusetts Amherst, some of my former students now educate me in their respective areas of professional expertise, particularly Joy Abbott, Miriam Anderson, Nancy Denig, Jim Kendra, Peter Klejna, Bill Nechamen, Laurin Sievert, and Aaron Wieneth.

I also thank many colleagues and friends around the country who are helping promote greener, healthier, safer, and more humane urban communities, especially Jerry Adelman, Will Allen, Tim Beatley, Armando Carbonell, Chris De Sousa, Peter Harnik, Mike Houck, Jon Kusler, Larry Larson, Roland Lewis, Mary Rickel Pelletier, Alex Polikoff, Ann Riley, Anne Spirn, Kathleen Tierney, Cathy Tumber, and Bob Yaro, among many others.
